URGE VOTERS OF PA. TO APPROVE BOND ISSUE NEXT MONTH

State Emergency Relief Board Sends $5,683,012 To Counties

ALLOCATE $600,000.00
$20,000,000 of The Loan To Be Used for Aiding The Needy

HARRISBURG, Oct. 5.—With an urgent appeal for voters to approve a $25,000,000 bond issue in November, the State Emergency Relief Board sent $5,683,012 to county agencies today to finance Pennsylvania's relief program during October and an additional $600,000 was allocated to the counties for work relief on rural highways.

Auditor General Frank E. Baldwin was the sole member of the board to oppose the bond issue. $20,000,000 of the issue will be used for aiding the needy, while the remainder will be distributed to state aided institutions and hospitals. The board urged voters to approve the issue in order to "provide indispensable relief for unemployed; avoid an enormous and immediate increase upon the burden of the taxpayers and secure greatly needed funds for state aided institutions and hospitals in every county in Pennsylvania."

Allocations for October relief included Bucks County, $8,500; Montgomery county, $61,126. Allocations by counties for highway work relief included Bucks, $12,277 and Montgomery, $13,452.

WITH WISHES FOR SUCCESS

(By "The Stroller")

George Parasho is leaving town this week after 17 years of service as Bristol's bootblack. George just couldn't make a go of the old business any longer. With the depression taking many of his customers away from him, and the swarm of small boys who flood our streets daily shining shoes at cut prices.

George had difficulty paying taxes and maintaining a shop with so much competition, so he and his little family are packing their household goods and moving to South Carolina, where George has a sister in the restaurant business.

Always a popular character among the businessmen on Mill street, George came to this country from Greece and settled here. He became a citizen a number of years ago and was always willing to give a helping hand to anyone or anything of a civic nature sponsored by the business men.

George's many friends will miss him but wish him success wherever he goes.

Burlington Orders Sale Of Properties For Taxes

BURLINGTON, N. J., Oct. 5.—City Council has ordered the Receiver of Taxes to proceed with a tax sale at once and sell all properties on which the 1932 assessment of an aggregate of $2,000 or more and on which the taxes are delinquent for any year or years.

The city has approximately $28,000 in the treasury at present. The county demands $59,000. A local bank was asked for a loan of $50,000 but the request was refused. The tax receiver has stated that he believes only about $40,000 can be obtained from a forced tax sale.

It was reported by the City Auditor that Burlington has paid the county $39,528.63 as the county's share of delinquent taxes for the last three years which this city has yet to collect. This was done he said so the city could get approximately $30,000 in return in school monies.

It is stated that although the county is demanding $59,000 in delinquent taxes the city legally owes the county $44,770.75. It is also reported that approximately $12,000 is due from the county schools.

CORONER SPEAKS ABOUT DUTIES OF HIS OFFICE

Praises District Attorney and Assistant for Manner of Handling Cases

GIVES IMPROMPTU TALK

High tribute was paid to the office of the Bucks County District Attorney in a speech which Coroner John J. Sweeney delivered to the Kiwanian Club of Doylestown.

"My work deals directly with the office of the District Attorney in many instances," said Dr. Sweeney. "And I must certainly state that Bucks County is indeed fortunate in having two men in that office, who are not only efficient but are officers who possess records of public service that are unquestionable and a credit to Bucks County and the Commonwealth at large."

In the opinion of the speaker the work of the coroner in any county should be handled by a physician or one closely affiliated with the medical profession.

Dr. Sweeney was called upon to pinch-hit as a speaker when a mix-up occurred in booking the speaker who was scheduled for the meeting. The Coroner's talk not only proved to be one of the most interesting in many months, but the impromptu program throughout, including Kiwanian Nate Gorelick's "sympathy orchestra," were real knock-outs.

Another feature of the program was the official "crowning" of an official benedict of Kiwanis, Charles Mamounis, owner of the Palace of Sweets, who was the subject of the usual initiation marking the taking of a bride.

The meeting was presided over by Vice-President Joseph Hafler in the absence of Judge Calvin S. Boyer, the president, who is attending the state convention of Kiwanis in Washington, Pa., this week.

Coroner Sweeney pointed out in his talk that the decisions of the Coroner in most counties are no longer guess work, although in some counties laymen are still carrying on in the office of Coroner.

The speaker pointed out the many ways in which an efficiently operated Coroner's office saves the county much money. In Bucks county the Coroner is paid on a fee basis and receives a stated sum per mile for travel and $10 for an autopsy, which in many cases a private physician would charge anywhere from $50 to $100 to perform depending on the type case.

Coroner Sweeney was formerly assistant police surgeon at Atlantic City before working in Doylestown so that his local as Coroner is along the same line with a great many more variations.

The work is sad at times, but Dr. Sweeney demonstrated. The Coroner must not only be the first mourner in many cases, but is called on to do many things, such as cut down bodies that have been hung, perform every conceivable type of surgical operation at post-mortem.

Coroner Sweeney declared that, in his opinion, often times the insurance companies were a bit unfair in Coroner's cases.

"It is nearly always a question of the insurance company being right and the beneficiary of the policy-holder being secondary," Dr. Sweeney said.

About eight Montgomery wheat growers have signed up, representing 2900 bushels of wheat. The acreage for Bucks county will be cut about fifteen per cent.

Bucks county will be divided into six communities, all of which will hold a meeting at various places throughout the county on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

With Ezra Miller as chairman, the growers of Newtown, Wrightstown, Upper and Lower Makefield, Middletown, Falls, Bensalem and Bristol townships will meet at the Newtown Co-operative Warehouse.

Richland and Milford township growers, who will be members of the sixth community, will meet at the home of Allen Schantz, Milford Square.

At each meeting a community of 3 growers will be selected, and the chairman of the community will serve as a director on the county board.

This board will hold a meeting tomorrow, at the Bucks County Administration Building, Doylestown according to the County Agent.

Up-to-date growers of thirty townships of Bucks county have made applications for contracts.

SEVENTY ARE ENGAGED IN 4-H CLUB WORK

Both Young Men and Young Women Who May Be Leaders Later On

TRAINED IN LEADERSHIP

Approximately 70 young men and women, who in several decades may be leaders in the agricultural movement in Bucks county, according to County Agent William F. Greenawalt, are affiliated with 4-H farm clubs throughout the county.

These young people are engaged in various activities, the object of which is to prepare them to take their places in farm activities in the future.

Mr. Greenawalt stated that the enrollment in these clubs may not be quite as large as in past years, but excellent results are being obtained by the various clubs, of which there are no less than eight.

One of the most interesting of these organizations is the Spinnerstown 4-H Shop Club, one of the few of its kind in this State. The club is composed of about 10 members with Oscar Rosenberger as the leader.

Activities of this club includes the making of mitre boxes, tool boxes, saw horses, setting and filing of bands, saws, sharpening flat edged tools, rope splicing and knot tying and shop work in general.

In addition to this, through the instrumentality of the members of this club, an organization known as the North Penn Club was formed. This includes the Richland Calf Club with three members, the Keller's Church Calf Club with four members and the Blooming Glen Pig Club which has three members.

These three subordinate clubs hold individual meetings, but once every month the three clubs meet with the parent organization for social and educational purposes. Frequently the clubs join in procuring outside speakers.

Three upper Bucks county boys are well qualified in leadership and in organizing new clubs, they having been representatives from Bucks county at the leadership training school at State College during the past four years. These boys exert their influence in organizing new clubs and in addition to this, they assume the responsibility of maintaining interest in the clubs. Boys thus qualified include Arthur Landis and James Gerhart, Quakertown, and Stanley Sames, Richlandtown.

Lower Bucks County also has several clubs which have been producing some excellent results. The Pineville Calf Club enjoys a membership of 12 members. Eleven young people are affiliated with the Doylestown Kiwanis Calf Club. Edgewood Calf Club has six members and the Edgewood Flower Club has a membership of sixteen.

Members of the Edgewood Flower Club last week played a prominent part in the flower show staged at Woodside Community House by the Makefield Mothers' Club by exhibiting many flowers they raised during the past summer.

Mr. Greenawalt stated that this year's exhibit by this club has been one of the best for several years.

Announcement has been made that the North Penn group is arranging for a social event in the form of a camp fire and "doggie" roast to take place Thursday evening, October 12th, near the pumping station in Quakertown. This group of young people has extended an invitation for the members of the lower Bucks county clubs to join in the party.

NRA MARCHERS AND FLOATS TRAVERSE STREETS OF BRISTOL IN BLAZE OF RED FIRE; 1500 IN LINE LAUDED FOR EFFORT

Borough in Festive Array, With Business Places and Residences Appropriately Decorated — Thousands Cheer Those in Line

SPEAKERS TELL WHAT NRA HOLDS IN PROSPECT FOR AMERICA

Men, women and children marching, riding upon gorgeously decorated floats, mounted upon horses, amid varied displays mounted upon vehicles, traversed the streets of Bristol last night amid a blaze of red fire.

Playing bands and drum corps, augmented by string bands, furnished the music to which the paraders kept step. The marchers carried flags, NRA banners, displayed numerous pictures of President Roosevelt and placards on which were printed snappy comment upon the NRA which was the incentive for the demonstration.

It took over an hour for the parade to pass a given point. It was estimated by those reviewing the procession that there were at least 1500 in line.

The town was in festive array for the occasion, and residences and business places were decorated and festooned with the national colors, NRA emblems and flags. Bright lights blazed from windows, thus honoring the paraders.

Immediately following the street demonstration there was a mass meeting in the high school auditorium, where speakers dwelt upon the new deal, and what the NRA holds in promise for America and those upon her shores.

Enlivened by patriotic selections given by the Burlington County American Legion Band, the mass meeting was aroused to a high fervor of enthusiasm which found outburst in frequent applause.

CROWD AT SCHOOL AUDITORIUM ASKED TO BACK MOVEMENT

What the NRA is and what it holds in prospect for America was expounded by speakers addressing a mass meeting in the high school auditorium here following the street demonstration.

The assembly was lead in the singing of a number of patriotic selections by Percy G. Ford. The invocation was by the Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, pastor of the Bristol Presbyterian Church.

The meeting was opened by Richard W. French, chairman of the NRA committee, who highly complimented the parade committee on the success of the street demonstration, and predicted if the same enthusiasm and effort are put behind the NRA that it likewise will be a success.

The presiding officer of the evening, J. Leslie Kilcoyne, Esquire, was presented by Mr. French.

"We are not here as the aftermath of parade, but we are here to make you realize that the very future of America hangs in the balance," exclaimed Mr. Kilcoyne. "This nation is in a very serious condition, as a result of the forces which were set in motion by the World War, and which have brought about the greatest depression this country has ever seen."

Joseph B. Hottle, Trenton, N. J., member of the Kiwanis Club of Trenton, a former vice-president of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the Trenton NRA committee, told the audience that this country had been groping around for four years in an apparently bottomless pit. "The government now offers to take us in partnership and has told business to put its house in order."

The president's re-employment agreement, it was explained by the speaker, "is effective only until December 31, 1933, when it is presumed that most of the individual codes will have been adopted." The speaker gave figures to show that 2,000,000 have gone back to work since the NRA drive became effective. Payrolls, he said, have increased 10 per cent. "People feel better, confidence has returned, we're enthusiastic, and we have become boosters."

The concluding speaker of the evening was Meyer H. Hoffman, of Trenton, N. J., vice-chairman of the NRA in that city. Mr. Hoffman stated that in his opinion the NRA means as much to this country as the War of 1917. "We are at war today with Depression," he stated. Thirteen million people were out of employment, representing about 30 per cent of the working population of the country. "If this movement is not successful, God knows where we will end," he said.

Mr. Hoffman then divided his audience into three groups, the employers, employees, and consumers. He explained to each their respective responsibilities to the NRA, and how its successful consummation will be to their interest.

Those cadets are certainly the ideal of those of younger years who look up with anticipation to the time when they can don the uniform. This was evidenced last night as one youngster who marched beside the cadets, during a rest period of the parade, stooped down and tied a shoe string of one of the cadets. It was a privilege he cherished.

The Master Barbers' Association featured a large truck with several barber-chairs mounted on same, in each of which sat a young woman with a barber in attendance upon each.

A large number of private cars, attractively decorated, were in the procession.

The ward leaders marched at the head of their respective divisions, and were: First, Edward Wallace; second, Alfred Conard; third, Charles Weik; fourth, Joseph O'Donnell; fifth, Arthur P. Brady; sixth, Edward Finnegan.

The fifth ward had a group of three displays, which were rather unique in character. On a large float was a boxing ring in which "Old Man Depression" and "NRA" engaged in fictitious combat, with "NRA" always getting the better of the argument, and knocking "Old Man Depression" limp over the ropes for the count of ten by an impartial referee. "NRA" was depicted as a muscular giant, and from all outward appearances perfectly capable of keeping "Old Man Depression" down and out.

"The Spirit of '76" was ably enacted, with three residents of the fifth ward taking the parts of the trio of Revolutionary "heroes." One proudly bore the stars and stripes; the second kept up a rhythmic rat-a-tat on his drum; while the third capably made use of his life. The costumes were in splendid keeping with the three well-known figures.

COLORFUL FLOATS, MARCHERS, MUSIC ENJOYED BY CROWD

The parade was led by assistant fire chief Samuel Hagerman in the chief's car, followed by the official marshal, Richard W. French, and members of the NRA family; members of borough council, and officials.

The Keystone Motor Patrol, including eight men riding their three-wheeled motorcycle cars equipped to render emergency aid to motorists, followed; then came members of Bristol Riding Club; Bristol Exchange Club; Bracken post cadet bugle corps; Bristol Rotary Club; Boy Scout Troops 1, 5 and 6; Cub packs; cadet bugle corps of Joseph A. Schumacher Post, V. F. W.; Schumacher post and auxiliary; Bucks County Roscoe Squad with auxiliary nurses and ambulance; Seascouts; Cornwells and Croydon Girl Scouts; Neshaminy Council, Degree of Pocahontas with members garbed as squaws and emitting war whoops at intervals; Bracken Post bugle corps; Burlington County American Legion bugle corps; St. Ann's A. A.; Bristol String Band; Italian Mutual Aid Society; O. E. D. L. No. 539; Sons of Italy; St. Francis Industrial School Band; Edgely Business Men; Furman A. C.; Jefferson A. C.; Y. G. S. C.

Fire companies represented with apparatus or men were: Bristol Consolidated Department; Newportville; William Penn of Hulmeville; Fergusonville; South Langhorne; Edgely; Bristol volunteer companies, Nos. 1 and 2; Croydon; Newport.

The Y. M. A. took part with a float depicting "The World's All Right," their forthcoming show; while St. Mark's Day Jones' Locker dance was advertised with an under-sea scene on a float.

The Master Barbers' Association featured a large truck with several barber-chairs mounted on same, in each of which sat a young woman with a barber in attendance upon each.

AN OBJECTIONABLE PLAN

It seems a little strange that Senator Byrd, who comes from that section of the country most jealous of states' rights, should be proposing a measure which would mean further Federal interference in matters chiefly of state concern.

The Virginian proposes that the taxation of gasoline be placed exclusively in the hands of the Federal Government. Under his plan, a uniform tax of five cents a gallon would be imposed, with the proceeds being apportioned among the states on the basis of their automobile registrations.

There are too many objections to the plan for it to receive serious consideration. The chief purpose of the Byrd plan would be to prevent gasoline bootlegging by correcting inequalities in taxation of the fuel. This aim, while a meritorious one, is of less importance than the objectionable features of the proposal. Under the state-tax plan, the gasoline levy can be reduced when the voters decide it is too high. This would not be the case under the Byrd proposal. Nor would there be any assurance that the tax would be held permanently to the five-cent level. Congress is a grasping body when it comes to finding revenue, and any promising new source offers a shining target for its rapacity.

The states already have seen too many of their rights taken from them by the Federal Government. To have their rights in local tax matters interfered with would be a dangerous step. The right to tax gasoline belongs to the states and the latter should keep it.

WAIT A WHILE

The question of whether the national recovery act is to be made permanent or whether it will end with the ending of the present emergency is being raised in some quarters.

J. S. Trille, president of the National Electrical Manufacturers Association, declared in a Cleveland speech his belief that the act would become a permanent part of America's national life. Similar views, we believe, have been expressed by others.

The question is not a pertinent one now. Not until the act has shown results by which it can be judged will it be of profit to discuss it from the standpoint of its permanency. The plan was decided on to meet a particular emergency. The emergency has not yet passed, nor has the plan had time to prove what it can do. It is more important that all efforts be concentrated at present on making the plan a success.

It will be time enough then to consider whether it should become permanent.

SYNOPSIS

The old home town—tiny Athens in the midwest—is awaiting the return of its most celebrated son, "Big Jeff" Randolph, for two seasons a national football sensation at famous Thorndyke, one of the most historic of eastern universities. Thorndyke influences had lured Randolph east because he had been a high school grid marvel. On vacations, some of which he spent at home, Tommy (as he was known to his Mom and Pop and other admiring Athenians) was "the glass of fashion and the mould of form" and an airy air of household manners. Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the town's richest citizen, had been Tommy's high school girl friend but a rift had slowly come between them until the dazzling Thorndyke hero had become enamored of Elaine Winthrop, artist and daughter of a Wall Street magnate. Tommy is coming home for Christmas; Athens is astir with preparations for a testimonial dinner. Mom pays all of six dollars for a fine white shirt for Tommy and wonders if he will approve of Steve, his brother Pete's fiancée, who is so lovable but not at all like Dorothy or Elaine.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

These were some of the things Mom thought of while she got ready for Christmas, cleaning up the house and planning the dinner. She was going to have a big crowd with her own and Uncle Louie and then she had asked Pete if he wouldn't like to ask Steve and her father, since they were alone, and Pete had looked so pleased that Mom was glad she could do something nice for him because Pete was always doing things for her although he never complained.

And when Pete told her to ask Steve and Mom did, poor Steve just took one look at her and started to cry without any warning at all, right before Pop and Uncle Louie so that the two of them got right up and went out which was more sense than Mom gave either one of them credit for, and Pete went out too. Steve was still wiping her eyes and sobbing and, when Mom put her arms around her and tried to comfort her, Steve broke down entirely and told Mom it was because she had hardly known her own mother and they had always been so lonely on Christmas, just she and her father and that was why she cried because she had always wanted a big Christmas and never thought she would get it.

And the two of them, with only little black Nippy sitting looking up at them, had a little cry together because Mom had never had a daughter, either, and now, she told herself, she didn't care whether Tommy approved of Steve or not, because the poor kid was worth her weight in gold.

Then Steve started laughing while she was still crying and wiped her eyes and said everybody would think she was a goof, carrying on like that but Mom told her not to worry about that and that it did a person good to break down once in a while.

Then they started to plan the dinner together and Mom was surprised how much Steve knew about housework, and she was glad, too, because it was going to be a big job with all of them around and the banquet and everything; and now she wouldn't have to call on Cousin Emily to help and that would be a big relief because the poor thing only got in the way although she meant well. Tommy couldn't stand her chatter anyhow.

The banquet was going over big and it seemed everybody in town wanted to go and a lot from Smithville, too. Tommy made some of the All-American teams; he didn't quite make the big one but Jack Chalmers said this was because most of the ones on the big one were seniors and it was their last chance; and anyhow, he observed, since Walter Camp died they were all about the same, and everybody knew Tommy was All-American whether they all gave it to him or not.

Mom didn't quite understand about the All-American but she naturally had an idea that everybody on it had to be an American and she didn't see why they didn't pick Tommy because he had such a good American name; but when she mentioned this to Pop he laughed right out in disgust because he was pretty sure about Tommy not making all the teams.

"It's a joke!" Pop said. "Why don't they call it a No-American team or an All-Hunky Team or an All-Dago team with all the names on it. It's a wonder they give him any mention at all because he can't get a 'ski' on the end of his name."

"All them boys is American born," Uncle Louie said, "that is what makes our great democracy with fresh blood from all countries."

"Rats!" Pop said, "it's like everything else, Americans don't get any show at all. It's the foreigners who're running everything. Like as not Al Capone told them who to pick like he tells them everything else. He's running the country with all the crooked politicians."

"You come from foreigners," Uncle Louie said, "what're you talking about?"

"I'm three generations in this country," Pop said, "my gran' father fought at Gettysburg. That's more than you can say."

"On your father's side, he did," Uncle Louie admitted, "but how about on your mother's side—your mother's father came from Ireland and both my grandfathers was in this town to meet him when he come."

"And where did they come from?" Pop returned triumphantly, "both of them Johnny Bulls—don't tell me."

"I'm just as American as you," Uncle Louie insisted, "maybe more."

"How do you figure that?" Pop demanded, and they went into a long discussion, over the same points they had argued many times. Mom didn't mind as long as they didn't get too loud.

Dorothy Whitney came back home about a week before Christmas, looking prettier than ever and quite a bit more grown-up. Mom thought, with a lot of new clothes she had bought ever east. She was very nice when Mom met her down street and Dorothy mentioned that she and her father had seen Tommy play one day and how fine he had played. Mom thought it would be nice if she could ask Dorothy and her father to Christmas dinner, too, but she didn't because there was the old Grandmother and anyhow they would be having a big Christmas at their own house although it would be kind of lonesome with only the three of them.

"When is Tommy coming?" Dorothy asked.

"I'm expecting him any time," Mom said. "I haven't just heard when but I suppose he wants to surprise us. I suppose you've heard about the banquet?"

Dorothy hadn't heard so Mom told her all about it. She thought it was kind of funny the way Dorothy looked because she didn't seem quite as proud as Mom thought she would, a little high-bred, Mom thought, but she remembered that Dorothy did have some of the old Grandmother in her, after all.

Tommy surprised them, all right; he surprised everybody.

Two days before Christmas a special delivery came. Mom had never had a special before and she was so nervous she would hardly sign her name. The first thing she thought was that something might have happened to him; but then, the football was over for the year and the letter was in his own handwriting. Still, she had a strange feeling while she opened it, with nervous chills running all over her.

She read the letter over and over.

Tommy wasn't coming home, . . . He was sorry but he had been invited to spend the holidays with some rich friends in New York, on Park Avenue, he said, as if that was something big although Mom didn't know just why. Then the rest of the letter was all about a wonderful girl he had met, an artist with a real studio and lots of money and she wanted to paint his picture and to have him meet her family.

At first Mom had a sick feeling in her stomach and a headache; so she took an aspirin and laid down on the couch in the sitting room for awhile and then she began to feel a little better. Tommy knew what he was doing and he wouldn't stay away from home on Christmas unless it was the best thing to do.

Yes, that was it, Tommy wouldn't want to miss Christmas at home and he would miss them as much as they missed him, and the least his folks could do would be to help him out and not make the poor boy feel any worse than he did.

She told that to them that night when they had all finished eating as she didn't want to spoil their supper (it was ham and cabbage and both Pop and Pete always liked it).

"The big bum!" Pete said.

"Now, Pete," Mom started to say; but Pete got up and put on his coat and took Nippy and went out without saying another word. Mom didn't know what to make of his acting that way.

Pop just looked at her funny and didn't say anything for a while but went into the sitting room and sat looking in the coal fire for a long time. Then he put on his coat and got a fresh paper of Mail Pouch and he went out, too. Uncle Louie kept on eating—he wouldn't have to get out of his room, now; Mom had been wondering what she would do with him and that was something off her mind, anyhow.

She cleared up the supper dishes when Uncle Louie finished, washed them, put them away, shook the table cloth, wiped the draining board, swept up the kitchen, just as always, as though nothing had happened.

It was a funny Christmas without Tommy.

Everybody did as usual. Pete got up for early church, as he always liked to do, then came home and took a nap. Mom went to a later church and came home and Steve was there and they started to get the dinner. Pop went to late church, Uncle Louie had stopped going to church a long time back but he was up early and down town and back in time for dinner.

Pete and Steve cut up a lot and little Nippy pranced around; then they all sat down to eat as though nothing had happened, as though nobody was absent. Mom tried to act as though nothing had happened, as though it wasn't the first Christmas dinner without Tommy, and she carried it off pretty well; but all the time her head was full of him and of every Christmas before and . . . she remembered every little toy Santa Claus had left for him and all the noise he had always made on Christmas.

who are united "in a common determination."

A delegation of marchers from the fifth ward carried a huge American flag, said to be the largest in Bucks County.

"Safeguard Their Future" was the caption of the third ward float, on which vehicle were grouped many boys and girls; while a second vehicle in this ward's display was a horse-drawn one, with the plea on the side of the wagon, "Let's keep NRA going without this whip."

A sail-boat, mounted on a truck, was in the first ward aggregation. The NRA sail attracted much attention, and the sign on the craft read "Do your part to sail this ship. Patronize home merchants."

The Farmer, Capital, Labor, and the Housewife as depicted on the NRA postage stamp, were brought to life by representatives of the fourth ward. These had places on a large truck, on the front of which decorated vehicle was a picture of President Roosevelt.

The sixth ward's float was representative of commercial interests of that ward, other than those represented by private floats or trucks. ## PARADE NOTES

The song was endless that the boys on O'Boyle's ice cream truck sang: "Hail, hail for NRA; now we get our ice cream, now we get our ice cream," and so on, ad infinitum. We'll bet they got their ice cream later for they surely deserved it.

Many old-timers were carried in memory to the days when they were young, as the jolly group of "straw-riders" on the D. Landreth Seed Company wagon passed by, in festive mood. The old-timers recalled the days of yore when they were young and gay, and frequently participated in such outings under the fullness of the moon; and young-timers wished they could hop right on the wagon and experience the grand thrill.

The little fellow who rode in the miniature "wrecked car," towed by Moffo's wrecker last night was the envy of every small boy in town. The young chap didn't mind sitting at an angle, and he didn't have to bother to steer. For him it was as good as being "king for a day."

Discarded flares were the "hobbies" taken up by youngsters in the borough last night. Some lads followed the paraders along the entire route, and when a flare was discarded there was one mad scramble.

"Hey, your car's on fire" was the exclamation made by one young woman as a truck of Artesian Products Company drove by with its load of coal appearing to be burning. Quite realistic, say we.

Tomesani's General Electric "Kitchen on wheels" captured the fancy of the thousands of watchers last night, and brought forth much comment.

Croydon Rescue Squad not only sent its ambulance and some private cars, but the men and women of the squad proved good marchers, and covered the entire route afoot.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

AFTER an interval when it has been scarce and high, iceberg lettuce is again plentiful, cheap and of very fine quality. Hearts of lettuce with a variety of salad dressings are popular throughout the fall and winter.

Many kinds of apples are in market—Jonathan and Delicious for eating, McIntosh for either eating or cooking and Rome Beauties for baking.

Cranberries are again in market. They are priced extremely low. Cranberry juice cocktail is a pleasant change from tomato and is easily made.

Full vegetable markets are well supplied with both native produce and some from other growing sections including the far south and west.

Potatoes are fine and plentiful but even so, the variety offered by macaroni, spaghetti or noodles is often appreciated.

Here are the menus from the Quaker Maid Kitchen.

FALL WRESTLING OPENS AT TRENTON ARENA

The Trenton Arena will inaugurate the fall wrestling season tomorrow night when the strongest array of grappling talent that has ever tread the mat of the Stockton Street amphitheatre will make their bow under the direction of Johnny Ipp.

Joe Savoldi, most popular of the collegians who has taken to the mat game will make his debut to the addicts opposed to the former "Red Devil," who is now wrestling under his own name—Al Giecwicz.

This go is slated for a finish. The other final match also marks the debut of the most colorful figure in the grappling realm, Man Mountain Dean, ponderous 300 pound bewhiskered giant, who will come to grips with Jack Hurley, rough and ready Irishman.

Sander Szabo, most popular pachyderm and idol of the Hungarian fans, returns to the wars in the feature 30-minute event, facing the toughest opposition that Ipp could muster, Stanley Pinto, who already holds a win over the doughty Szabo. Among other victims of "Dead-Pan" Stanley are Gus Sonnenberg, Earl McCready, Sammy Stein and Herbie Freeman. He is one of the most adept users of the fore-arm nudge in the game and the last match between the two men in Philly was one of the roughest ever witnessed there.

Len Macaluso, famous Colgate All-American fullback, also makes his first appearance in the Capital City, exchanging holds with George Manich, perennial Jersey favorite, in a 30-minute-go.

The opening contest brings together Able Ginsberg, Jewish roughhouse ace and Tony Felice of Italy, who defeated Paul Boesch in seven minutes, last week.

The arena has been completely and thoroughly renovated and fans are assured of the best talent that the game offers for the new season.

PIGSKIN PUNTS (By JUNO)

Five local boys are making good in a big way in professional football. These boys, members of the Overbrook White Jackets, are: Matt Hutchinson, "Socks" Seneca, Johnny Cole, Mike Chone and "Fats" Stackhouse.

Hutchinson and Seneca need no introduction to the football followers of Bristol as last season these two, along with "Gice" Dougherty, made football history with the Overbrook team.

Johnny Cole was last year's blocking back of the Bristol High School and made his debut two weeks ago by playing sixty minutes of top-notch football.

"Mike" Chone is a former Passaic boy, now living here, and played with the Passaic Professionals. He is a tackle. Chone is Polish and his name is really longer than the way he spells it.

"Fats" Stackhouse played guard in the opener game with the Overbrook team against the Mauch Chunk eleven and will be heard of later.

The Bristol boys will be seen in action over the week-end as the Overbrook team plays Barney Google's Mayfair team on Saturday and on Sunday they play in Atlantic City.

Other games on the schedule are: Brooklyn, Lancaster, Stapleton, Rochester, Washington, Millville, Pottstown, and Memphis, Tenn. Join the Overbrook team and you will never fail in geography.

Joe Meiman who manages the team is a local insurance agent and is always looking about for material in the football town of Bristol. There is still plenty of material about in these players from Passaic.

The Bristol Y. M. C. A. football team opened its season on Sunday by playing a scoreless tie with the Kingston Roses.

"Mike" DeRisi has moulded together a fine aggregation representing the St. Ann's eleven. The team opened with a victory over the Ambler A. A. club and will meet the Seymour Bulldogs on Sunday.

"Dom" Dougherty, of the Trojans, is certainly padding up to give the Bristol team a victory over the Hights.

town Nomads under the lights at Windsor Airport on Friday night.

The Furmans deserve a great deal of credit for the way they handled themselves at Beverly. The Beverly club outweighed the Bristol youths man to man, but the locals outplayed their opponents in the second half.

The Furmans will play Roselyn away on Sunday.

We hope that Coach Dougherty, of Bristol High, will bring what the local fans have been waiting for for years—a victory over Doylestown High!

"Ganner" Corrigan is all set for the opening whistle which will bring his club into action. Corrigan is coach of the Bristol A. A. team for the third consecutive year.

"Narrow Corner" Exciting Picture of Great Adventure

"Short thereof is man's life; and narrow is the corner of the earth wherein he dwells," says Somerset Maugham in his novel, "The Narrow Corner." Warner Bros. picture of the same title, which opens tonight at the Grand Theatre, is fashioned from this theme.

It is a strange tale, this, full of the color of strange places and strange people—and yet at bottom, as are all the characters of a Somerset Maugham story, these people are vibrant with real life we all live. They act and move and feel just as we all do.

The story opens in Sydney, Australia, with a wealthy man sending his son away, secretly, in the night, aboard an old ketch with an out-law skipper—bound for nowhere, told only to keep moving, and not to get too near to a habitation where white men might be.

It winds up in a colorful island of the Malay Archipelago, among as strange an assortment of human beings as it would be possible to meet, including a retired sea captain, wealthy from heaven knows what devildom on the seven seas, his son-in-law and granddaughter, an innocent girl of primitive passion, and a Dutch trader.

The picture is a triumph in exciting and thrilling plot, in unique characterizations and in its exotic, glamorous and picturesque settings.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has never been better than he is in the escaping young Australian, wanted for the murder of his paramour's husband, Dudley Digges as Dr. Saunders, an opium-smoking outcast, is a revelation; Reginald Owen, William V. Mong and Ralph Bellamy are all better than this reviewer ever remembers having seen them before.

"Kitchen Carnival" At Lit Brothers This Week

"Pul-leeze, Gussie! Won't you smile for me? I do need a gas range!" The pretty young woman caressed the grease-painted chin of Gloomy Gus, "The Man Who Never Smiles," who is delighting crowds at Lit Brothers' "Kitchen Carnival" this week. The prize for making him laugh is a new gas range, but thus far no-one has succeeded—not even the skillful young woman who tried to carry him by storm. For Gus continued his jerky, robot-like progress about the room and his glassy stare never wavered.

Speaking of robots, a real one is another of the attractions of the exhibit, which has been attracting thousands since it opened Monday. This is Willie Vocalite, most versatile of the wire-veined gentry, a protégé of Westinghouse. Willie, though not very expressive as to face and gesture, is able to stand and sit, to smoke cigarettes and fire a cap pistol, to run up bags and even make a speech... just an all-round robot of no mean ability.

These are the "frothing on the cake." The more informative and helpful exhibits are attractive and holding the attention of exceptionally large crowds. Long lines of booths contain exhibits of interest to housewives, and many of them are in charge of skilled demonstrators, each of whom shows how to operate his particular device or to make his particular glint of chromium and the glow of copper, and a general air of gaiety and interest in what is going on.

Store executives say that they have not seen such a response to an exhibit of this character in several years, and are inclined to attribute the vigorous revival of home interest to the improved outlook induced by the NRA campaign.

Fred Fitzsimmons

Fred Fitzsimmons is the dean of the Giants pitching staff, having served with the team for nine years, sharing his career at Muskegon, Mich., in 1920, and was picked up by the Giants in 1925 from Indianapolis. Fred will be one of the three starting Giant pitchers in the world series, sharing that burden with Hubbell and Schumacher. He's thirty-one, lives at Arcadia, Cal., stands five feet, eleven inches, and weighs 197 pounds.

Lefty Clark

Lefty Bill Clark came to the Giants with Lefty O'Doul from the Dodgers, in the deal for Sam Leslie. He won twenty games for Brooklyn last year and was considered one of the best southpaws in the league. He played with Terre Haute in the Three-I League before reaching the big leagues. An attack of "flu" kept him inactive much of the season but he will be available for world series service. Clark was born twenty-nine years ago in Louisiana but moved to Mississippi and now is back in his native state.

Carl Hubbell

Carl Hubbell is the Giants' star hurler and perhaps the best southpaw in the game today, far outranking Bob Grove on the basis of the season's performances. He twirled 46 consecutive scoreless innings to set a new National League record, and allowed an average of only 1.31 runs per game in his season. Hubbell was purchased from the Beaumont team of the Texas League with a $40,000 price tag on him and has proven well worth the investment. Carl was born thirty years ago in Missouri and lives now in Meeker, Okla.

HARRISBURG—Should Jack Frost

decide to delay his impending seasonal visit, John F. O'Brien, Lemoyne, will probably enjoy a second apple crop this year. A Stayman Winesap tree in his garden has blossomed again. O'Brien is also raising a second crop of red raspberries. He said he has already gathered two quarts of the luscious berries and expects to get about six quarts more.

Why—

Chesterfields are Milder

TOBACCO to grow, to ripen and become mellow, has to take in or absorb something... not Vitamin D, of course, but something that it gets from the right amount of Sunshine

It's the Southern sunshine you read about, combined with the right sort of climate and moisture, that makes the Carolinas, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, and Virginia the best tobacco country in the world.

You can stand down there in that Southern sunshine and almost see it grow.

This ripe, mellow tobacco is skillfully cured by the farmer. Then, for 30 months, it's aged—just like fine wine.

It takes the right quantity of each kind of these tobaccos, blended and cross-blended—then seasoned with Turkish, to make a milder cigarette. Sunshine helps. Just try it!
